City

Celina is a vibrant city in Mercer County, Ohio, serving as the county seat with a population of around 10,900 (10,935 as of the 2020 census). Nestled on the northwestern shore of Grand Lake St. Marys—the state’s largest inland lake—the town offers scenic waterfront living and plenty of outdoor activities like boating, fishing, and lakeside events. Founded in 1834 by James Watson Riley and named after Salina, New York, Celina experienced booms in the late 1800s thanks to oil and natural gas discoveries. Today, it’s known for its strong manufacturing base, accessible community amenities, charming historic downtown, and a solid quality of life with year-round recreation and a tight-knit atmosphere.
