MODERNIZING A CLASSIC THE JH DOLLAR BUILDING

Completed in 1920, 351 California Street's three story limestone base and renaissance-baroque ornamentation make it a timeless and historic landmark of San Francisco's rich maritime and banking history. Its reinforced concrete construction allows for extension operable window-line and high ceilings throughout the building, accented by its brick façade work.

Today brings a new era to 351 California Street, as common area renovations cap off a centennial repositioning to cater to today's modern workforce. Rich with amenities, IT infrastructure, and institutional-quality ownership, the JH Dollar Building is the premier destination for discerning downtown firms of the future.

AVAILABLE SPACE

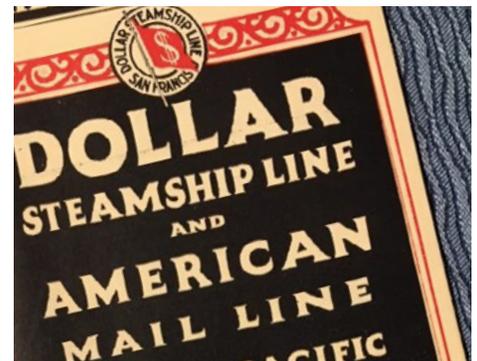

TRANSIT OPTIONS

351 California sits at the center of abundant transit options, boasting a walk score 99 and transit score of 100. BART, Muni, Ferry, AC Transit, and GG transit all within a 5-10 minute walk.

BUILDING AMENITIES

The building offers a guard-serviced lobby, common area bike storage, locker facilities, and new Penthouse Tenant Amenity / Event Center and rooftop urban beehive program.

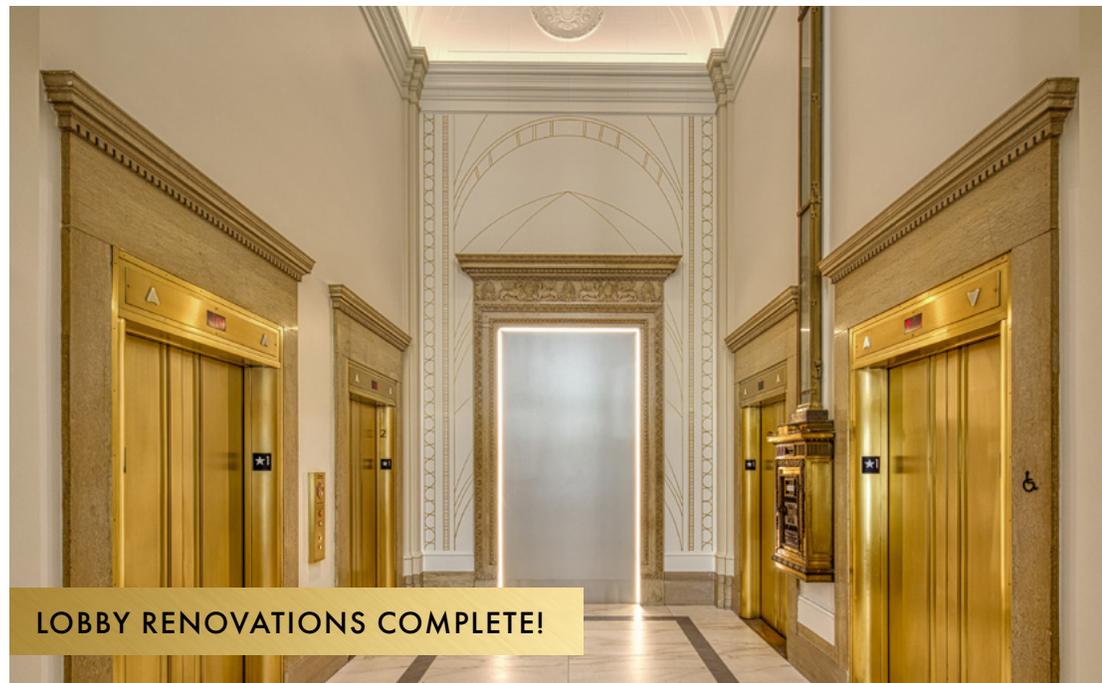

HISTORY

Completed in 1920 as the second downtown building by the Dollar Family, the JH Dollar building served as the headquarters for the shipping magnate's company before later becoming the regional headquarter for Pacific Bank. Its Category A historic designation is the highest level for preservation and recognition by the city of San Francisco.

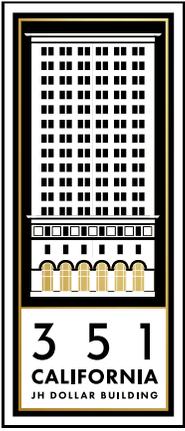

WELCOME TO THE FINANCIAL DISTRICT

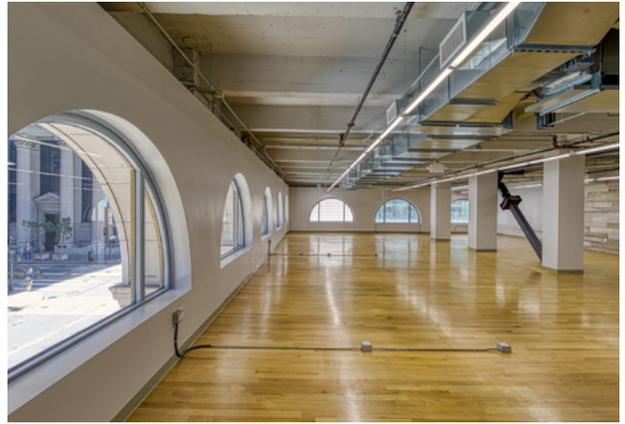

The Financial District has been the heart of San Francisco since its inception, and 351 California is at the center of it all. The historic commerce corridor was anchored by Montgomery and Market Streets, which both intersect with the famous cable car lines along California Street. Today it remains the pre-eminent destination for companies and visitors looking for an abundance of service and entertainment amenities, and is the home to a litany of prestigious Fortune 500 companies.
