LOCATION

Where Vancouver Comes Together

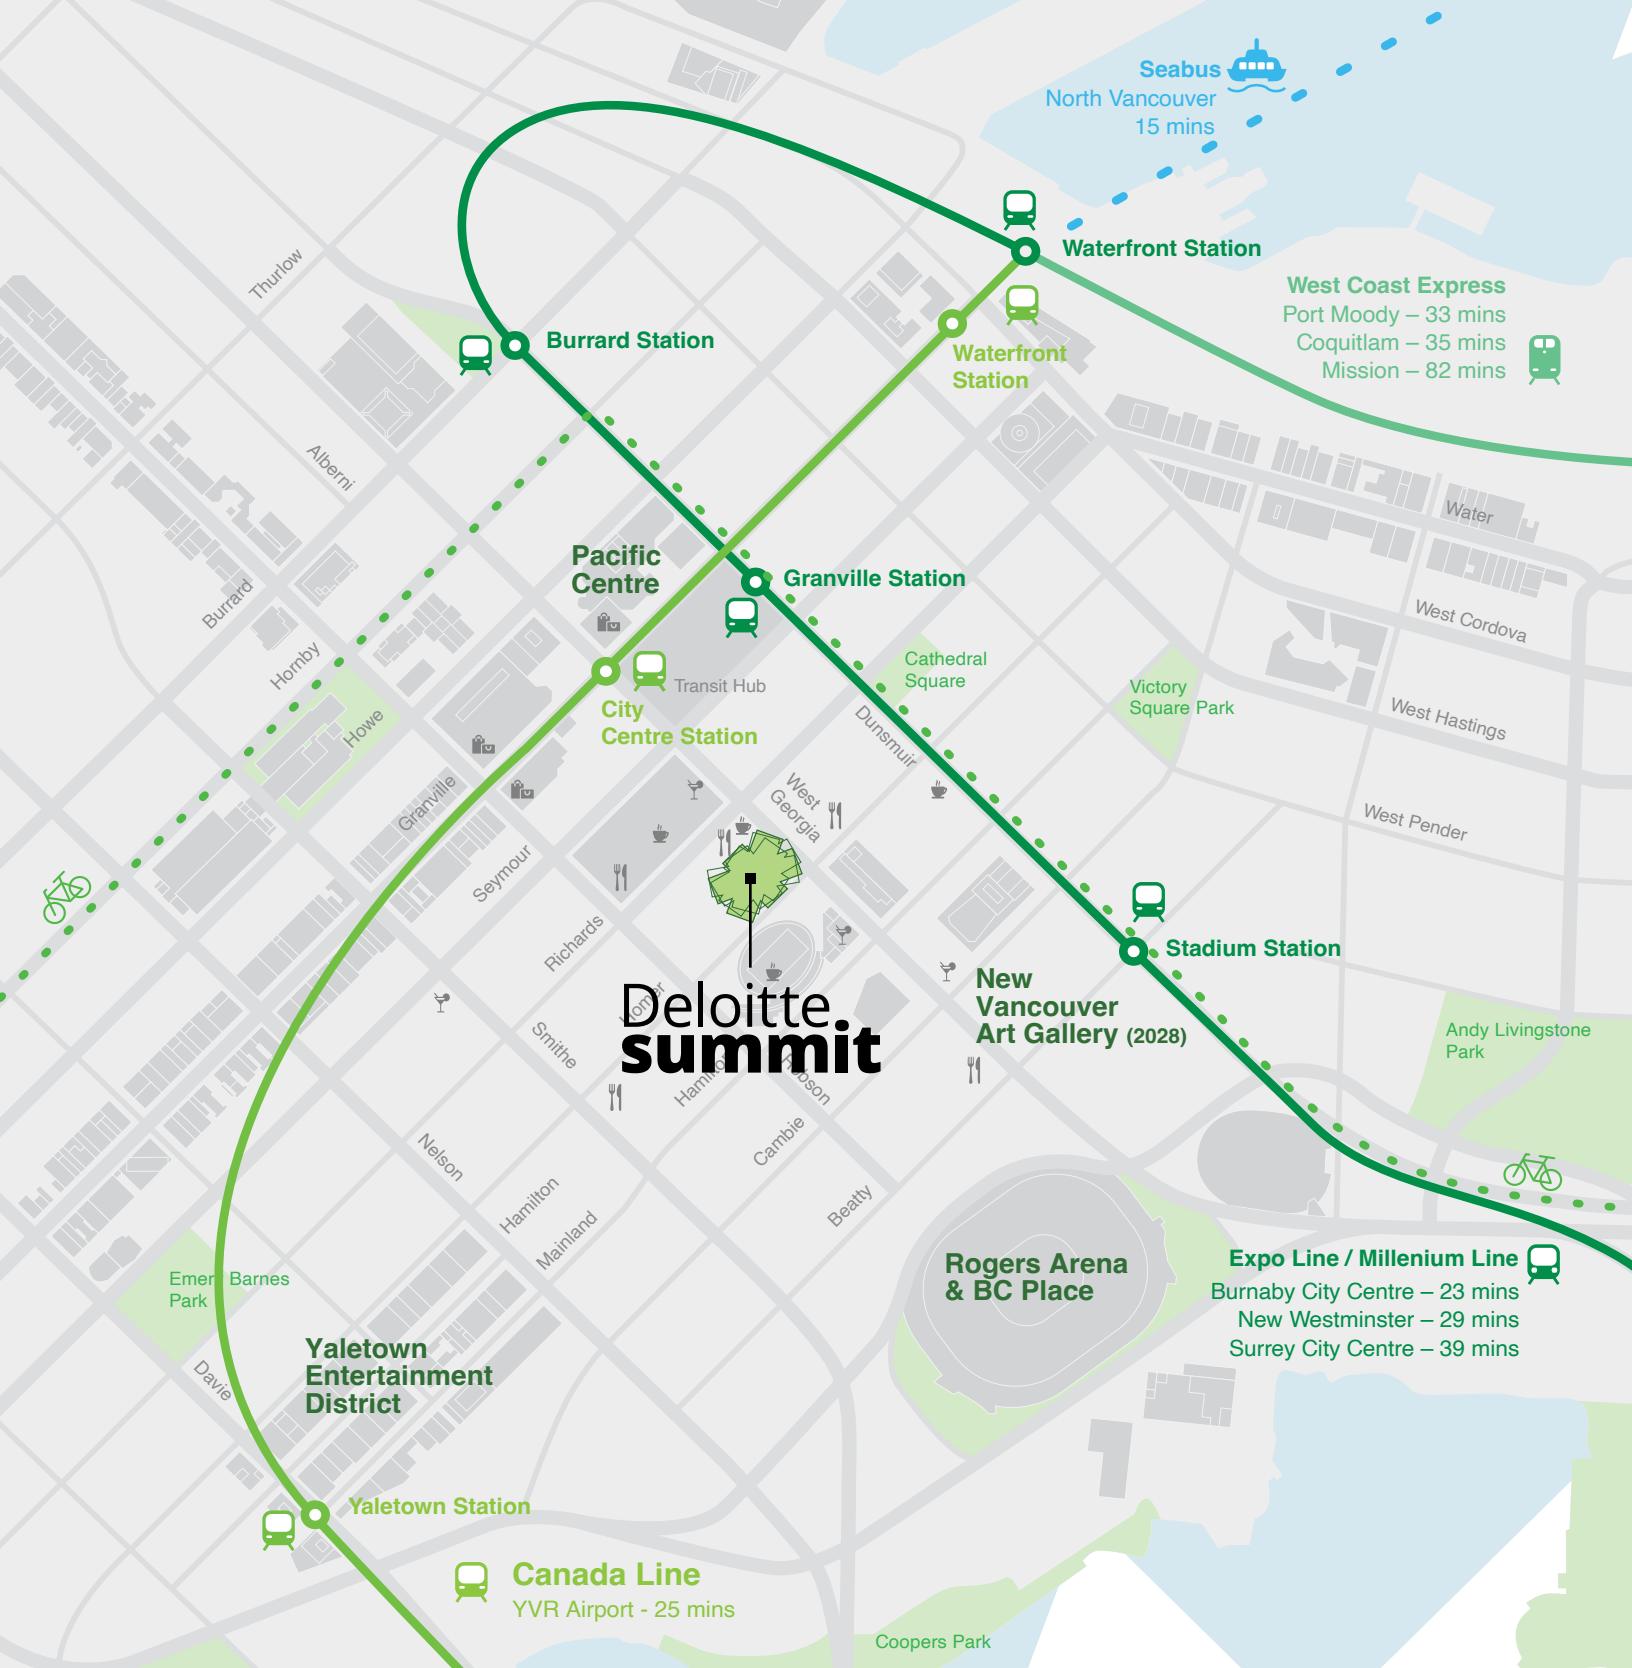

For some time, the central business district has been shifting eastward and consolidating. 410 West Georgia is at the center of downtown Vancouver and on the right side of the ceremonial avenue Georgia Street.

Only steps away are other major amenities which today include the Central Library, BC Place Stadium, and Rogers Arena which hosts the city's main sporting and musical events. The Vancouver Art Gallery's striking 320,000 SF new museum will be built a block away.

Directly across the street, The Post — now complete and home to Amazon's 1.1 million SF Vancouver headquarters — has brought a significant influx of talent and energy to the area. The transformation continues with the Northeast False Creek Plan and the dismantling of the viaducts, which will introduce 30 acres of new public space, 12,000 new homes, and an expanded Creekside Park. This redevelopment is led by the same acclaimed design team behind Manhattan's iconic High Line, marking a bold reimagining of the urban waterfront.

Award-Winning Architecture

Deloitte Summit is a 355,000 square foot masterpiece designed by OSO Design as Lead Designer with Merrick Architecture as the Executive Architect.

A collection of stacked boxes, each containing 4 floors, with differing orientations, Deloitte Summit offers its occupants a variety of breathtaking views of Vancouver's repositioned downtown core, Burrard Inlet, and the North Shore mountains.

The rotation of the boxes allows for spaces to be filled with greenery and also creates an opportunity to provide outdoor balconies at the bottom of each stacked box. From an interior perspective, the floorplate design lends itself to a unique, creative work environment not seen in a traditional office tower.
