FREDERICK AT A GLANCE

With close proximity to the Denver metro area and the Northern Front Range, Frederick is a dynamic community with multiple recreational amenities and facilities, full of diverse opportunities while continuing to respect its heritage as a mining town incorporated in 1907.

Frederick is a booming community located approximately 30 miles north of downtown Denver along the I-25 corridor. It offers residents convenient access to both the Northern Front Range and Colorado’s capital city.

Part of Weld County, Frederick had a population of 8,679 in the 2010 U.S. Census and 14,513 in the 2020 U.S. Census. The most recent U.S. Census Bureau estimate places the town’s population at approximately 18,241 residents in 2025, representing growth of more than 25% since 2020. Over the past decade, the Northern Front Range urban corridor between Denver and Fort Collins has continued to experience significant residential growth, with Frederick emerging as one of the region’s fastest-growing communities.

FREDERICK, COLORADO BY THE NUMBERS

- Frederick’s population grew from 14,513 in 2020 to an estimated 18,241 residents in 2025, representing growth of approximately 25.6% in five years. The town continues to rank among the fastest-growing communities along Colorado’s Northern Front Range.
- The community benefits from a regional labor force of approximately 133,933 workers within a 10-mile radius, providing employers access to one of the strongest workforce markets in northern Colorado.
- Frederick’s economy continues to diversify, with major employment sectors including retail and restaurant services, education and healthcare, local government, construction, professional services, and logistics/distribution. The town’s strategic location along the I-25 corridor supports continued commercial and industrial growth.
